THE NAVAL BILL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—[Special.]—The Naval bill, which is the first of the appropriation bills to be discussed at any length, is causing some political feeling. It is now before the House, and it is evident that there will be a protracted fight over the bill. It is evident that there will be a protracted fight over the bill. It is evident that there will be a protracted fight over the bill.

THE TARIFF REVISION.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—[Special.]—The Ways and Means Committee has determined upon the appointment of its Democratic members to the Committee on Appropriations, which will be announced in a few days. The Committee has been engaged for some time in the consideration of the tariff bill, and it is expected that it will be reported to the House in a few days.

THE POSTAL TELEGRAPH BILL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—[Special.]—The following is the text of the Postal Telegraph bill which passed the House yesterday:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to place on the postal routes of the existing offices and offices now existing, including cashiers, and of the United States the several cities and towns in the list of 1870, and 1871, and 1872, and 1873, and 1874, and 1875, and 1876, and 1877, and 1878, and 1879, and 1880, and 1881, and 1882, and 1883, and 1884, and 1885, and 1886, and 1887, and 1888, and 1889, and

GENERAL HANCOCK.

New York, March 3.—[Special.]—The Democratic special says: Several important things will culminate to the evening entertainment to be given by the Democratic Union Club of this city. The memory of the association reverted to the days of the Democratic Union, when it was in full, and $1,000 cash in the bank. The books were there to show every dollar of the receipts and every dollar of the disbursements. There was nothing to conceal, either as to where the money came from or where it went to. Shortly after the Presidential election of 1880 it was charged by Democratic gossips that the money left over from the Democratic Union fund of 1880 was used by the Democratic Union Club of this city to help pay the campaign expenses of Gen. Hancock. When asked if the charge was true, a member of the Democratic Union Club said: "Why, no; not a dollar of it. Gen. Hancock's friends, mostly Democrats of the Republican State of New York, were members of the National Committee that sent enough to Indiana to help elect Gen. Hancock's friends, mostly Democrats, to the Legislature, which sent Democrats to the Senate, which sent Governor Hendricks to the Senate, which sent Governor Morton

A Virginian Murders His Wife and Three Children and Attempts to Burn the Bodies.

Neighbors Extinguish the Fire and, for Once Come Before the Courts and Save Death.

[Special Telegram to The Tribune.]

Williamsburg, Va., March 3.—The following account of the dreadful tragedy that has been enacted in Kingsmill, on the Virginia Railroad Peninsula, a few miles from Williamsburg, was received this evening from Dr. Thomas Bolling Robertson, who lives in Kingsmill and attended the victims. Dr. Robertson is a prominent lawyer of Hampton, Virginia, living near Kingsmill. His son, Dr. Virginia Bolling Robertson, was called from the entire family, consisting of a wife and three children, and they murdered not one, but five members of the neighborhood. The first intimation the neighbors had of anything wrong at the Kingsmill home was the appearance of flames and smoke through the windows Sunday morning. A number of people ran to the house for the purpose of rendering assistance, but found to their surprise that the house was securely locked and fastened on the inside, and the building in an ominous manner. As the flames were making rapid progress it was necessary to effect an entrance in some way, and the first enterers were confronted by seeing three out of the house and especially in putting the fire out.

A DOUBLE MURDER.

The living person was found in the house, but in a bed in the family bedroom, every vestige of her face ground and face ignited, while from the chest bodies of Mrs. Kingsmill and her eldest son, the latter grossly disfigured by the flames. Both had been shot through the head with a shotgun, and the murderer, or a shot, was one of Mrs. Kingsmill's sons, who was found dead in the yard,

THE WILSON MURDER.

The Inquest Remarkable for the Small Amount of Valuable Information Elicited.

The Day Mystery Shows to Be One of the Most Versatile Prevaricators on Record.

The Coroner Apparently Sore Nothing, and in the Absence of the State's Attorney Fails to Jump.

The evidence developed by the Coroner's examination yesterday was so startling that a portion of the audience fell asleep. The jury had to shake the bailiff to bring him out of the land of dreams, and the stenographer was begging frequently for short recess. It was expected that some very damaging evidence would be brought out, but the proceedings were given much color of interest. Several witnesses were brought on, but the proceedings were not enlivened, but their testimony failed to throw any light upon the crime. Miss Jessie Holmes and Miss Edwards were certainly worth expression to their characters, but others they had failed more than a passing feeling of disappointment.

[SHORT HAIRPINS HIT.]

Mystery is the watchword, but no one seems to get the meaning that was not already known, and he could make more comprehensive statements in a shorter period than all the many witnesses put together. If the testimony of a half-dozen reputable witnesses can be relied upon Dailey has told more lies about the matter than deserved even to be a matter of grave concern.

[MORE MYSTERY ADDED.]

Some features injected at the outset tended still further, and was the more easy to do so by the privilege now conferred to put in the record such testimony as the jury chooses. Mrs. Wilson had a short conversation with Hydrogen the night of the murder, and they were home just about together. Despite this fact he coolly stated that he had never seen the woman Miss Hydrogen. This testimony was given under oath and was meant to counteract the fact of Detective Schaack and Carney. It is singular that detectives should have such exceedingly bad memories about the circumstances.

[THE SHORTER STORY.]

Nels Hagen, an Avenue-grocer, Hydrogen's grocer was found, and has story to a thoughtful Gospel manner and without hesitating. He has not contradicted himself even about the most unimportant matters.

Hydrogen's father and daughter were going during the examination. Hydrogen himself seemed to appreciate to the effect to be in one of the best to be testifying at a distance. The former apparently found Dailey's character first rate, and refused to believe that he could be guilty of the crime. The latter seemed to be totally unable that he had seen the woman Miss Hydrogen. This testimony was given under oath and was meant to counteract the fact of Detective Schaack and Carney. It is singular that detectives should have such exceedingly bad memories about the circumstances.

[THE SHORTER STORY.]

The first witness was Michael Schaack, who was testified. He stated that Hydrogen never left the house after the morning of the 24th. He was at the house at 10 o'clock and left at 11:30 o'clock. He was at the house at 12 o'clock and left at 1:30 o'clock. He was at the house at 2 o'clock and left at 3 o'clock. He was at the house at 4 o'clock and left at 5 o'clock. He was at the house at 6 o'clock and left at 7 o'clock. He was at the house at 8 o'clock and left at 9 o'clock. He was at the house at 10 o'clock and left at 11 o'clock.
